Also needed is a permit from the Head of Archive which is granted on the basis of a Research Declaration filled in by the researcher. The auxiliary library of the Research Room can be used by those holding a daily pass. In this case, there is no need to fill in a Research Declaration.

Use of the Reading Room
The joint Research Room of Manuscript Archive and the early Printed Books Archive can be used only by researchers holding a valid Reader Pass. Researchers who have just a daily pass are entitled to use only the auxiliary library. To have a look at the original documents, you need to own a Reader Pass for at least 6 months and a Research Declaration signed by the Head of Archive. It is strictly forbidden to make phone calls in the Research Room or to disturb the order and piece of research in any way. It is also forbidden to take your bags to the research tables, so you are kindly requested to place them on the shelves dedicated for this purpose. We draw your attention to the fact that our Research Room is equipped with a safety camera system.

Request and order of documents
Preparation of documents can be asked by researchers in person, filling in a Request Form, by e-mail [2] or via phone (+361 232 3563, + 361 224 3775). Orders are served on the following day, with the exception of microfilms which are served immediately. Requests coming in by e-mail will be served if they arrive on the previous day the latest, until the end of the opening hours of Manuscripts Archive. Orders coming (in any way) on Friday will be served on Tuesday. An order can be served only if the storage reference number given by the user is correct. Medieval manuscripts can be researched only on microfilm. Original medieval manuscripts are permitted to take into one’s hands only with the permission of the Head of Archive and solely in highly justified cases. Research of unprocessed manuscripts can be permitted by the Head of Archive, based on a detailed research plan submitted in writing. The use of closed fond units can be permitted by the Head of Archive only on the basis of a written consent from the curator of the fond unit.

The use of documents
After submitting his or her Reader Pass, researcher gets the ordered manuscript and verifies this by his or her signature in the diary placed in Research Room. We kindly ask you to check whether the manuscript is not damaged. Any damage or loss should immediately be reported to NSZL staff working in the Research Room. One researcher can use a maximum of two manuscripts at the same time. However, documents ordered by and reserved for researcher can be used during the course of stay in any optional order. In Research Room, you can write only with a pencil. It is forbidden to ruin the order of documents or to endanger their physical state in any all way. Researchers not keeping themselves to rules and regulations valid in the Research Room can be deprived of their Researcher Pass.

Returning documents

Manuscripts have to be returned by researchers 30 minutes before the closure of Research Room. At the same time, no new document will be served. NSZL staff in charge of Research Room checks the state of manuscripts and verifies having taken it back by his or her signature in the Diary of Use. We kindly ask our researchers to let the staff in charge of Research Room know if they want to use the manuscript on the following days.

Reservation of documents

On demand of the researcher, manuscripts are reserved on the researcher’s name by assigning a number to the query. Apart from that, researcher can ask for further documents from repository but the total number documents cannot exceed 10 items. If the researcher does not ask for a prolongation of his or her reserved documents, after a period of two weeks, they will be carried back repository. No medieval manuscripts will be reserved. These items must be ordered on each occasion when the researcher wants to use them.

Making copies

Ordering copies

A copy of documents in the Manuscripts Archive can be ordered in Research Room or by e-mail (manuscriptum@oszk.hu [2]). Orders will be accepted only on the basis of exact data, with no missing details. The following copy types are provided in Nationl Széchényi Library: microfilm, photocopy, Canon-copy or digital copy. There are certain documents of which no photocopy can be made (e.g. manuscripts in binding), due to art protection reasons. Only NSZL’s Restoration and Bindery Department can make a copy of any item in the stock of the Manuscripts Archive.

Copy reproduction

Copies ordered can be used exclusively for the purpose of research. If researcher wants to reproduce the copy in any traditional, paper-based publication, electronic publication or on a web surface, he or she must submit a written application for publication from the Head of Archive, stating the exact bibliographic data of the publication. Fee of reproduction is determined by the Head of Archive, in line with the all-time valid Rules and Regulations of National Széchényi Library.

Copyright issues

NSZL’s Manuscripts Archive is not the owner of the copyright of documents stored by it and NSZL cannot take on the responsibility to have its users keep to these rights. It is the researcher’s moral and legal responsibility to keep to valid copyright regulations when using texts from manuscripts or publishing them in excerpts or as a whole.

Getting around in the collection

We kindly draw our researchers’ attention to the fact that following the foundation of National Széchényi Library in 1802, after the establishment of the Hungarian National Museum in 1810, NSZL had been integrated in the organization of the Museum and the Library had worked within this framework up until 1949. That is the reason why old releases and bibliographic references usually state the name of the Hungarian National Museum as the place of storage (e.g. Hungarian National
